Jeremiah 33:14-16

The days are surely coming, says the Lord, when I will fulfill the promise I made to the house of Israel and the house of Judah. In those days and at that time I will cause a righteous Branch to spring up for David; and he shall execute justice and righteousness in the land. In those days Judah will be saved and Jerusalem will live in safety. And this is the name by which it will be called: "The Lord is our righteousness."

According to Jeremiah, God has spoken concerning the covenant with God's people, and wanted to remind them that God had not forgotten the covenant.

This passage is dated back to the postexilic period of the history of God's chosen people. During this time they would have sorely needed the word from Jeremiah, letting them know that God was still moving and active, that God still loved them, and wouldn't neglect to fulfill the promises that had been made. God wanted the people to keep the faith and to trust in God's timing for their lives.

That's definitely something that should resonate with us today. Jeremiah was speaking to the ancient people of Israel and Judah, who were waiting for the Savior to come. We hear those same words, and we, too, are waiting for the Savior to come (again).

In the years between, millions of events have taken place that have changed the face of the world. Yet both we and those to whom Jeremiah spoke are/were in need of the same thing: faith in God to provide for our salvation.

God was faithful to our ancestors, and God is faithful to us today: Christ will come again.

Those in exile weren't too thrilled. God seemed distant, life was unpleasant, "salvation" was nowhere to be found. But Jeremiah was telling them that they should take heart because God had not forgotten them. They, however – like us – were only human, and found it difficult to envision a different kind of future. It wasn't easy to trust that something better was on the horizon.

Their faith was faltering.

In Our Greatest Gift, Henri Nouwen tells a parable of faith and hope by imagining twins – a brother and a sister – talking to each other in their mother's womb.

The sister says to the brother, "I believe there is life after birth."

Her brother strongly objects, "No, no, this is all there is. This is a dark and cozy place, and we have nothing else to do but to cling to the cord that feeds us."

But his sister isn't swayed and insists, "There must be something more than this dark place. There has to be something else, a place with light where there is freedom to move."

Still, she could not convince her twin brother.

After some silence, she said hesitantly, "I have something else to say, and I'm afraid you won't believe that, either, but I think there is a mother."

This infuriated her brother.

"A mother?!'" he shouted. "What are you talking about? I have never seen a mother, and neither have you. Who put that idea in your head? As I told you, this place is all we have. Why do you always want more? This is not such a bad place, after all. We have all we need, so let's be content."

Well, the sister was quite overwhelmed by her brother's response and for a time didn't dare say a word.

But she couldn't let go of her thoughts, and since she had only her twin brother to speak to, she finally said,

"Don't you feel these squeezes every once in a while? They're quite unpleasant and sometimes even painful."

"Yes," he answered. "But what's special about that?"

"Well," the sister said, "I think that these squeezes are there to get us ready for another place, much more beautiful than this, where we will see our mother face-to-face. Don't you think that's exciting?"

The brother didn't answer.

He was fed up with the foolish talk of his sister and felt that the best thing would be simply to ignore her and hope that she would leave him alone.

The chosen people were being "squeezed" by the contractions of a painful life in exile, and they had no faith that things would ever change for them.

They were like the twin brother in our story: pessimistic and not wanting to talk about what they felt they were powerless to change.

The twin sister, on the other hand, was the "Jeremiah": squarely in the middle of the reality of the present but interpreting the signs around her and the feelings she had as more than just "nothing" or mere coincidence.

That interpretation led her to a faith in a different kind of future...faith that there would be a mother they would see face-to-face and faith that a bright and glorious life awaited them after they were made ready by those painful squeezes.

It's funny how similar our lives today are to God's chosen people that we read about in Scripture. And it's interesting how we can probably see ourselves in both of the unborn twins.

Sometimes we may find it difficult to see a brighter future in which there is a God that we'll see face-to-face. It's tough to believe that the pain and struggle of the present time might be preparing us or molding us for something better.

I can understand having feelings like that, given that I, too, live in this world that is hurting so deeply.

And yet I was just telling my mother in law on Saturday morning how I can't imagine what it would be like to walk through this life without faith in God's promises that we will spend eternity with the Lord.

I can't imagine living without the hope that this life is NOT all that there is.

I can't imagine enduring all of this "squeezing" and thinking that there is no redemptive purpose to any of our pain.

We are in the midst of the first week of Advent: a time of preparation, a time of waiting, a time of watching, a time of hope. We will spend these weeks remembering the promises of old, celebrating the answers to prayer, and placing our confidence for the future in God's hands. It's our faith that brings us here, our faith that sustains us, and our faith that will direct us along the path that culminates in our final destination with God.

In the Disney animated classic based upon Lewis Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland," Alice wanders through a frustrating world of tardy rabbits, singing flowers, and one curious-talking cat.

Her visit with the cat begins as she continues down a mysterious darkened trail and stops at a large tree.

The tree is covered with signs that point in every possible direction: "Up," "Down," "Yonder," "Back," "This Way," and "That Way."

Poor Alice looks more confused than ever and asks herself, "Now let's see. Where was I? I wonder which way I ought to go?"

Just then, she hears a melodic voice that seems to be drifting down from the trees.

She looks all around and finally observes two ghostly eyes and a wide toothy grin floating amongst the boughs of the great tree.

The grinning teeth inquire of Alice, "Lose something?"

"N-n-no, I was just..." stammers Alice in reply.

Suddenly, a pink striped feline body emerges from the branches.

"Oh, you're a cat!"

"A Cheshire cat," he responds.

"I just want to ask which way I ought to go," asks Alice.

"Well that depends on where you want to get to," says the cat.

"Well, it really doesn't matter," answers Alice.

"Then it really doesn't matter which way you go," says the enigmatic cat just before vanishing into the woods again.

(preachingtoday.com)

If you have no goal in sight, it probably doesn't matter which way you go.

But that should never be the case for a Christian.

As we begin our Advent journey, I want to be focused on Bethlehem and the manger and the birth of the Messiah. I want to walk once more through the story we love so well, seeing what fresh truth I might find this year for my life. That walk can admittedly be difficult to navigate in such a commercialized Christmas season.

And so as I make that trek – as I cling to my faith and look forward each week to lighting another candle – I will keep my eyes out for each and every reminder that the gift of salvation is on the way.

I plan to take my son out to see the beautiful Christmas lights that foster imagination and out of which fantastic dreams are born. I want him to have the same sense of wonder that I had as a boy when those lights flooded my own vision. And I pray that he, too, as he is raised to know exactly who the Messiah was and is, will have a sense of awe and gratitude when we arrive at the brightly lit nativity scene and our eyes linger upon the baby in the manger.

Merry Christmas!

FILL A BAG FOR A TEEN

We are partnering with Bridget Jarvis at the Wayne Westland Community School District Family Resource Center to make the Christmas holiday brighter for local teenagers. Through the Shhh! Program, we had 28 bags to fill with stocking stuffers. All bags were spoken for before Thanksgiving. Thank you to all those who took a bag (or more). The students we are helping are either homeless or in need. A suggestion list was included with each bag, but it will be up to you what you want to put in the bag. The bags will need to be returned to Judy Curtis by December 15.

The Mitten Tree is back this holiday season for interested parties to fill with gloves, mittens, hats and scarves.

SUNDAY SCHOOL INFO

We are offering 2 Sunday School classes this year: one for readers and one for non-readers. Both classes will be filled with lessons, activities, crafts and even a few outreach/mission projects. Children go downstairs to the Fellowship Hall after the Moment with Children chat with Pastor Mike in worship.

MISSION/OUTREACH

CROP WALK UPDATE: 12 churches participated this year with 144 walkers. $7419 was raised with online donations for a grand total of $18,921 raised by the walkers. This is 10% MORE than was raised last year. Thank you to our Kirk walkers and all who donated.

DAYS FOR GIRLS: The Kirk donated $300 to Days for Girls to assist the local Days for Girls team in shopping for fabric during the Black Friday sales. Over 10,000 kits have been made and distributed around the world. Days for Girls believes all women deserve reliable feminine hygiene protection enabling them to attend school and/or work. The reusable feminine hygiene kits last up to 3 years and are a solution in many parts of the world where disposal of sanitary products is not practical.

CONSECRATION SUNDAY RESULTS

As of November 22, the sum of Consecration Sunday Giving Estimates was $93,964. When added to anticipated estimates from several members not in attendance the grand total increases to $102,689. This amount is about $3,800 less than the amount estimated for 2018. While the Kirk did see a number of pledge units increase their Giving Estimates for next year, we lost two significant units of contribution due to illness and relocation. Nevertheless, the Consecration Sunday program again proved effective in ensuring that the spirit of our giving – time, talents and resources – remains consistent with the direction God provides. While we acknowledge the fact that many of us are getting older, we also recognize that only means that the landscape shifts: our time, talents and resources change as our lives change. The Kirk's membership has staved off much direr times, and we are blessed to be in a sounder financial situation than previous. God has more mission and ministry in store for our devoted church family, and our faithful community is equal to the task.

Thank you for all that you are and all that you do!

Don't Sweat the Small Stuff

has returned for another season. We are accepting donations of sweatpants (boys and girls sizes 6-12), underwear and socks for the Wayne-Westland Community School District's Family Resource Center. These items are given to the 13 elementary schools to be handed out when a child needs a change of clothing whether it be from an applesauce package exploding on them at lunch, to falling into a mud puddle at recess or any other accident that can happen during the school day. There will be a marked bin for donations. Thank you for your continued support in this annual outreach mission.

Classy Lassies and Grazers

Classy Lassies and Grazers will not meet for lunch in December as the last Wednesday of the month falls on Christmas Day. The next gathering will be on January 29, 2020.

Financial Report as of 10/31/2019

	October	Year to Date	Budget

Expenses	11,278	100,239	102,170

October was negatively impacted as expected by having 3 pay periods in the month. The loss experienced is approximately $800 short of one pay period expense. With some anticipated larger capital expenses in the near future it is likely that the checking account will be bolstered with draw downs from either savings or Kirk Mutual Funds or both.
